Dear Friends in Christ,

One of our greatest glories as Catholics is our union with the Holy Father in Rome. Each year, the Church around the world offers a sign of its esteem for the Pope by offering prayers for him and by contributing to the special collection called Peter's Pence.

The Pope's great responsibility in the Church is to be a light and a beacon and a source of unity for Catholics around the world. But he is a symbol not only to Catholics but to all people of the peace and unity that the Father in Heaven offers to His children. Pope Paul, like every Pope, has had to bear within himself and suffer much from the wars and divisions among men. We must support him daily in our prayers.

The collection offered to the Holy Father at this time each year is also very important. Both Pope John and Pope Paul have been distinguished for their concern for the poor of the world, wherever they may be found. We give this money to the Pope, not for himself, but that he might, from his world-wide perspective, distribute it where it is most needed. This collection helps him to respond especially to the victims of disasters, of droughts and of wars throughout the world.

I believe that such a day of prayer and sacrifice for the Pope is good for us too. We tend so often to see only the needs of our own parish or of our own area. The very existence of the Pope in the Catholic Church calls us beyond ourselves to a broader vision of humanity. And, on a Sunday like August 12th, by sharing in the event with as much generosity as possible, we will also share in the world-wife vision and concern and compassion of our Holy Father, Pope Paul.

Sincerely yours in Christ,

Alexander M. Zaleski
Bishop of Lansing

Special envelopes will be distributed today. Please return them next Sunday.

NEW COVENANT

July 17, 1973

The Rev. David Harvey
St. John's Catholic Church
Dear Father Harvey:

I would like to thank you very much for agreeing to help us in our experiment in selling our magazine in your parish magazine rack. As I mentioned in our telephone conversation today, Paulist Press has invited us to consider joining their Unified Magazine Program. We are running this experiment to help us to determine if our magazine will sell from a parish magazine rack. Presently almost all of our sales are to people who are a part of the charismatic renewal.

I have enclosed ten copies of the July issue. Please place them on your magazine rack and sell them as you do all the other magazines. They sell for $.50 each. I will be sending you ten copies of the August issue when it comes out. When I send you the August issue I will also send you a reply post card on which you can tell me how many of the July issues were sold. I will do the same for the August issue. Ad I mentioned on the telephone, you can keep all of the revenues from the sales of NEW COVENANT. We are only interested in determining if our magazine will sell from a parish rack.

Again I would like to thank you very much for helping us in our experiment. May God bless you.

In His service,
Stephen W. Peterson
General Manager

Christianity begins at home. If you are concerned about the needs of children, able to love and accept them, provide training and guidance and give them a normal family life, why not reach out and extend your heart and home to children in need.

Homes are desperately needed for adolescents (ages 12-17) and for emergency (short-term) placements. Those interested please contact the Washtenaw County Department of Social Services - 120 Catherine St., Ann Arbor, phone 769-8716.

NEWS...

from Senator Mark O. Hatfield
Republican, Oregon

(This is the conclusion of a series of excerpts from a speech by Senator Hatfield at the National Right to Life Convention)

Let me suggest ten concrete examples of actions we must take as part of our commitment to the protection and nurture of all life.

1) PROGRAMS OF SEX EDUCATION FOR OUR CHILDREN. Much of the abuse of sex, and the occurrence of unwanted pregnancies, comes through ignorance. Respect for life is rooted in understanding the miraculous process that gives life to a man and woman. If a child's introduction to sex comes from the street corner or from innuendo or other children, he is likely to view sex as something dirty, exploitive, and indecent. He or she is likely to become irresponsible and uninformed in sexual activity. There are programs and proposals for aiding our children, from very early ages, in understanding the meaning and awesome wonder of how life is created. If we are to be for life, and encourage those attitudes which recognize that human life is to be valued from the outset of its creation, then let us lead in encouraging these programs of sex education.

2) BIRTH CONTROL INFORMATION AND AVAILABILITY. A plurality of sexual mores exists in our society, and will continue. If we are blind to this fact, that only encourages more unwanted pregnancies. We can hold different personal views about contraception. But if our primary commitment is to nurture and protect all life, then we must do everything to insure that those who do not wish to bear life will have every protection against conception. To deny this necessity will undermine the values we stand for. Therefore, I firmly believe that information about birth control, and contraception options, should be made freely available. Our belief that all human life, from the outset, is sacred should lead us naturally to enhance the conditions that insure life will come into creation when it is desired and intended, by the live of a family.

3) SUPPORT FOR FAMILY PLANNING CLINICS. Many of the poor and unfortunate citizens in our land lack the essential knowledge concerning care during times of pregnancy, and other information concerning the beginning of a family. Instead of society advising the poor how to take unborn life, we must provide every fact and service essential to nourishing such life, and building the family.

4) REFORMS IN ADOPTION LAWS. One of the greatest tragedies we face is that a child without a home and parents desiring to adopt a child face so many obstacles to being united. There are substantial revisions that should and must be made in laws affecting adoption, particularly at the state level. Further, the crux of this problem centers especially with handicapped children, mixed blood children, and adoption across racial lines. There are direct tax incentives that can be enacted in some cases. Beyond this, we must ease the laws and frequently senseless restrictions which impede an unwanted child from being accepted into a loving home.

5) IMPROVED FOSTER-PARENT PLANS. Short of adoption, the foster parent or foster home can bring the love of a family into the life of a neglected child. Here again, however, far greater private support, as well as means for public assistance, is required.

6) OTHER CARE FOR ORPHANS AND UNWANTED CHILDREN. Our goal must be to provide all children who are deprived of a family with the love of a home. Until this is possible, care for some of these children will have to be provided by private and state-supported institutions. Regrettably, they frequently suffer from inattention, insufficient funding, and impersonalizations. We who are for the right to life can never tolerate any child being subjected to such loveless conditions. Both by personal involvement and public support, there are countless opportunities for us to demonstrate in such situations our belief in life through works of love.

7) SUPPORT FOR DAY CARE CENTERS. Mothers with children to support - especially if they are the sole provider for them - need desperately the assistance provided by day care centers if they are to be responsibile and loving to them. Bearing a child brings with it the obligations to love and support that child. For many, this can be fulfilled only with the help given by day care centers. We have a responsibility to urge State, Federal and local development of such centers; and to encourage single parents, welfare mothers and others to take advantage of their services so they can break out of the welfare cycle and give their lives dignity and hope.

8) CARE FOR UNWED MOTHERS. One of society's greatest tragedies is the way the unwed mother frequently is ostracized from society as she bears her child. A woman in such a situation needs sympathetic care, love and counseling. Her health and well-being is intimately related to her baby's. We must provide all the means possible for nurturing and supporting the life of the mother, and easing this most difficult period in her life.

9) RESEARCH INTO BIRTH DEFECTS. Much remains to be known about the causes and correction of birth defects. The government should not only increase its research in this field, but also provide funds to support both the mother and the child in prenatal and postnatal care. This is a clear part of our commitment to the value and gift of all human life.

10) RAPE TREATMENT CENTERS. A woman who has been raped stands in deep need of psychiatric and medical care. Some centers have been established specifically to provide care for such victimized women. They can provide private, anonymous assistance which will encourage the woman to seek such immediate care. Then, the pain and trauma of her life can be eased, and the chance of pregnancy can be prevented. Hospitals and clinics perhaps in cooperation with the police departments, should establish such centers in every city. Again, this is a clear part of our mandate, and an expression of our commitment to be for all life.

All these concrete steps are simple evidences of compassion, and expressions of our convictions. The costs, the burdens, and the demands of commiting ourselves to life are high. The obstacles to be overcome may seem enormous. To affirm life, and hold out the option of life in the midst of tragedy can be arduous. Solutions on the side of life always will demand far more care, far more concern, and far more endurance than those on the side of death. We must deepen the resources in our own lives that allow us to make this choice, and to extend it to others.

In confronting the whole issue before us, society faces a deeply troublesome, complex question, laden with deep human tragedy. But what do many want to do? Resort to violence once again. Much of the impulse is to degrade life, to take life once more, thinking that is some kind of a solution.

But violence gives us no solution. Whether it is on the battlefield, in our streets, in our prisons, or in a doctor's office, we must stop the temptation of resorting to violence and blood. We can believe that there is a better way; that there are more ideal, more compassionate, and more humane ways to respond.

We believe in life's sanctity. That belief is rooted, it seems to me, in a recognition of the Transcendent. Life is sacred because it is formed and given by the Creator.

We must restore a recognition of the spiritual reality that upholds all life. It is a vision of life, and of the love which fills the universe, that must capture our hearts and give us faith. Then we can believe in life, nourish life, and commit ourselves to life.

Then we discover that the greatest love is a universal love - a love which binds us to all life, and affirms God's presence in the world.
